

Co-Sponsor the HOMES Act SD. 1592 and HD. 3625

An act promoting housing opportunity & mobility through eviction sealing

Why is the HOMES Act needed?

As soon as an eviction case is filed, a tenant has an eviction record. Regardless of whether a tenant was actually evicted, the mere fact that an eviction case was filed against a tenant means that their eviction court record is publicly available. A study by Mass Law Reform Institute, Evicted for Life, found that tenants were rejected from housing simply because they had a case filed against them. It doesn't matter whether the tenant did anything wrong, paid off the rent or won the case.

What can tenants do if they have an eviction record?

Nothing. Regardless of the outcome of the case, there is nothing tenants can do to seal their eviction record and move on. There is no second chance. Unlike credit reports or criminal records, there is no process by which a tenant can seal an eviction record. Other cities and states have adopted eviction sealing protections including California, Colorado, Virginia, Minnesota, New Jersey, Washington DC, Illinois, Oregon, Utah, Indiana, Nevada, Texas, and Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio. Massachusetts should do the same.

How can we protect tenants?

SD. 1592, filed by Senator Lydia Edwards, and HD. 3625, filed by Representative Mike Moran, would protect many tenants from being unfairly marked with an eviction record by providing a process for tenants to petition the court to seal the record. The bills would require the court to seal a court record:

- For tenants facing no-fault eviction after the conclusion of the case.
- For tenants facing a non-payment eviction within 14 days of satisfying a judgment or agreement.
- For tenants facing fault eviction after 7 years without another fault eviction case.

The bills also makes it illegal for a tenant screening company or landlord to use or report a sealed court record for purposes of screening a tenant.

“Eviction cases are a stubborn blot on any renter’s history. They are nearly impossible to scrub away, even if the tenant made good on obligations....”
