

HOMES Act Fact Sheet: H.4505

An Act promoting housing opportunity & mobility through eviction sealing

“Eviction cases are a stubborn blot on any renter’s history. They are nearly impossible to scrub away, even if the tenant made good on obligations....”

What happens when an eviction case is filed?

As soon as an eviction case is filed, a tenant has an eviction record. Regardless of whether a tenant did something wrong or was actually evicted, the mere fact that they were party to an eviction is publicly available. Even winning in court hurts tenants.

How are eviction records being used?

Eviction records are used as informal and unregulated tenant screening tools resulting in homelessness. In 2013, the Trial Court’s case management system, masscourts.org, became publicly available. Shortly after that, there were reports from tenants, community groups, and legal aid organizations about how eviction records were becoming a significant barrier to finding housing. A study by Mass Law Reform Institute, Evicted for Life, confirmed these reports, and found that tenants were rejected from housing simply because they had a case filed against them.

What can tenants do if they have an eviction record?

Nothing. Regardless of the age, merits, or success of the case, there is nothing tenants can do to seal their case and move on.

Unlike credit reports or criminal records, there is no process by which a tenant can seal or modify an eviction record. Recent laws in Colorado, California, Illinois, Nevada, Washington D.C., and New Jersey have allowed tenants to seal eviction cases. Massachusetts should take action to enable tenants to seal eviction records.

How can we protect tenants?

H. 4505 would protect tenants from being unfairly marked with an eviction record by providing a process for tenants to petition the court to seal the record.

H. 4505 would require the court to seal an eviction record:

- For tenants facing no-fault eviction after the conclusion of the case.
- For tenants facing a non-payment eviction within 14 days of satisfying a judgment.
- For tenants facing fault eviction after 3 years without another eviction case.

H. 4505 also makes it illegal for a tenant screening company or landlord to use or report a sealed court record for purposes of screening a tenant.
